Special friends get look at elementary school life

By Kimberly Heinrichs

About 100 grandparents went back to elementary school last week.

But they didn't need the teacher's permission to leave the room and they didn't have homework that night. In fact, they left the Upland school grounds halfway through the morning.

The grandparents and other "special friends" attended Magnolia School's third annual "Special Friends Day," to watch their young relatives at work.

"I enjoy it and of course it makes the children glow," said Dorothy Weisweaver visiting her sixth-grade son Todd after stopping off in her first-grade grandchild's classroom. Her mother Elvira Snyder, visiting her grandchild and great-grandchild, has visited each of the three years Magnolia has held the event.

"I'm interested in my grandchildren. They always call me up and ask me," she said, watching Todd work.

In one of the first-grade classrooms students copied such bits of wisdom as "Grandparents are special" and "Grandparents know their addition" from the blackboard for their proud relations.

In another classroom, children split off into separate groups and played various learning games.

Charlotte Bassler pronounced class for her grandson Nicholas Zajicek quite different from her own education years ago.

"It was more structured. I sat at a desk and you had your

Teens choose board room over Oval Office

By Marianne Aiken

Most teen-agers would rather be president of a company than president of the United States, and they admire professional athletes more than their local government leaders.

Those were the results of a leadership survey released Monday which polled 1,000 16-through 18-year-olds across the country, including Rancho Cucamonga.

The survey was commissioned by General Dynamics as part of the company's 20th Century Leadership Outreach Program.

Part of that program is "Lyndon Johnson," the latest in the company's PBS television series on 20th Century leaders, which will be shown tonight at 9 on KCET/Channel 28.

The poll also showed, when considering other leadership positions, about half the respondents would be interested in serving as class president.

After professional athletes, eight out of 10 teen-agers said they most admired their parents.

Believing in yourself and being decisive were the two most commonly selected traits of successful leaders.

Being hard-working, aggressive and courageous were other admired traits.

A little more than half the students polled agreed that leaders usually are honest. Less than one in five counted good looks as playing a role in being a successful leader.

A majority of students said successful leadership is earned, not inherited.

Students scored well on a history quiz that also was part of the survey, with virtually all of them identifying the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. as a civil rights leader.

Students did very well on questions relating to female leaders of the 20th century. Ninety percent knew that Susan B. Anthony helped win voting rights for women. About 80 percent correctly identified Indira Gandhi as a past leader of India, and nearly three out of four picked Sandra Day O'Connor as the first woman appointed to the U.S. Supreme Court.

More than half knew that Winston Churchill was the originator of the phrase "Iron Curtain."

On recent presidential history, students did not do so well.

Only 41 percent correctly identified Lyndon Johnson as the president who succeeded John F. Kennedy.

reading and your writing, but no interchange like this," she said pointing to the card word game Nicholas played with another student.

"I think it's a better way of teaching. It seems that they're more advanced," added her husband Herman.

Next door, Marilyn and Orlin Brees said they enjoyed dropping in on grandson Trevor Robinson's class.

"I think it's great. It gives you an idea of how the classrooms are run," Orlin Brees said. □

Alta Loma senior turns grief in positive direction

By Marianne Aiken

Tami Molineux still cries sometimes about her brother who was killed by a drunk driver almost two years ago, when he was 13.

But the 18-year-old Alta Loma High School senior took her grief and used it to start a fight against drunken driving.

"It tore a gaping hole in my family," she said of her brother's death. "I cry. I cry a lot."

Shortly after her brother Robbie's death, Molineux started a chapter of Students Against Drunk Driving.

As a result of Molineux's tears, she estimates "thousands" of students now have signed contracts agreeing to call their parents for a ride home if they are ever too drunk to drive, no questions asked. It's a two-way contract: the parents also agree to call for a ride if they are too drunk to drive.

"I've noticed drunk driving is a fact of everybody's life," she said.

Two Alta Loma High School students have been killed in drunken driving accidents in the last year, she said.

"We want to get that down to nothing."

Highway Patrol officers visited the Alta Loma High School campus recently with information about the dangers of drunk driving, bringing with them the carcass of an automobile wrecked in a drunken driving accident that happened a little more than a month ago on the Devore (15) Freeway. The person in the accident suffered extensive injuries.

The officers also displayed graphic photographs of actual scenes of drunk driving accidents.

A CHP officer who investigated Robbie Molineux's death, Ronald Miranda, said while he was on campus working at the SADD display, a student came up to him and asked what the big deal was about drunken driving.

When he asked her if she ever knew someone who was killed by a drunk driver, she said no.

"That's the big deal," Miranda said. "You don't know. We're trying to show you what can happen before it happens. They don't know the impact until it's too late."

Spring break — which will be next week in most West Valley schools — is one of the prime times for drunken driving accidents, Miranda said. Graduation is another time for a high incidence of drunk driving fatalities.

Juveniles now will face a stiffer drunken driving law. Because of the recent change, the legal blood alcohol level for juveniles is half that for adults, Miranda said.

Young people caught driving with a .05 percent blood alcohol content will be considered legally drunk, Miranda said.

"If you drive drunk and hurt somebody, it's a felony," he said.

Molineux said she's trying to start a ride program in San Bernardino County for drunken drivers.

Funding would offset county costs

SAN BERNARDINO — The county Board of Supervisors voted support of Assembly Bill 46 last week, a measure which would provide state funding to offset the county's costs in preparing a state-mandated Hazardous Waste Management Plan.

According to a report to the board filed by Senior Executive Analyst Fazle Rab Quadri, the state has already provided $90,000 for development of the plan over two years.

But that doesn't cover the actual costs, and the legislation, if passed, could mean $120,000 for the county plus a chance at two additional grants.

Council turns thumbs down on giving up grant funding

By Kimberly Heinrichs

Upland's town center Economic Development Corp. will have to come up with another way to raise $30,000 after its request was turned down by the City Council last week.

The EDC asked for a portion of the city's $183,000 Community Development Block Grant funds to install several signs, including two monument signs made of river rock or brick to stand in the Euclid Avenue parkway.

Last year the council granted $50,000 of the block grant funds to the EDC to begin its revitalization project.

The town center merchants hope that better signs will bring more attention to the shopping area, which loses business to flashier and more recognizable shopping centers and malls.

What's good for the town center is good for the city, said Charles Pilcher, president of the EDC's consulting firm R & R Clayton Consultants Inc.

The council agreed with him up to a point by granting the EDC $10,000 to add to its existing $15,000 revolving loan program.

The fund will allow five business owners at a time to take out $5,000 loans for architectural and engineering fees for plans to upgrade their facades and make their buildings earthquake-resistant, Pilcher said.

The EDC has just sent out applications for the loan project and has had no takers yet, Pilcher reported.

While new signs still are a priority, the consultant said he wasn't sure what steps the organization will take. One option is returning to the council with the same request next year, he said.

The $30,000 was just the first installment needed for the entire $90,000 sign project, he added.

The signs are not a priority with the city right now, Councilman Frank Carpenter said, considering the other projects needing funding.

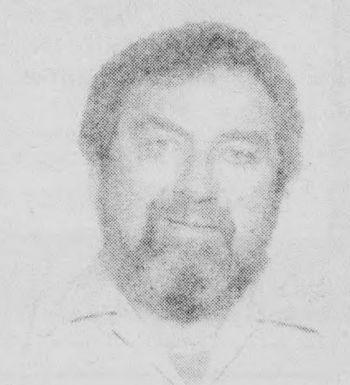

Mayor Richard Anderson said his hesitation lay in the fact that owners and merchants have yet to take advantage of the loan program.

"The ball's in their court," he said. "If nobody is actually going to do it then I think it would be unreasonable for us to dump money in that particular retail center."

Carpenter said there was also a question of whether the sign program would fall under federal standards of eliminating slums and blight, serving primarily low and moderate-income people or meeting urgent health and safety needs.

The other items approved for the block grant funding were:

- $40,000 for making the lower-floor library restrooms accessible to the handicapped. The money also will be used to automate both sets of doors to the building.

If you need to make imitation cut nails you can do so by filing the heads of any size flat head nails to an irregular rectangle. After filing the nails, put them in a jar with some salt, vinegar and a little water. In a few days the nails will darken and rust and look very much like old cut nails.

Metal window screening makes great coarse sandpaper. Cut the screening to a workable size and bind the edges with plastic tape to protect your hands. This abrasive doesn't wear out.

Board eases some worries with decision

By Kimberly Heinrichs

After parent protest over a previous plan to alleviate overcrowding, the Central School District board voted last week to send some sixth graders off to junior high early.

"The board felt real good about the decision because junior high is a positive experience," board president Debbie Baker said.

The board voted unanimously to send two sixth grade classes from Dona Merced and one from Valle Vista to Cucamonga Junior High School next school year in order to relieve overcrowding at the two elementary schools.

Sixth graders at the district's other elementary schools will remain at those schools, according to the plan prepared by a 14-member committee.

An earlier plan to redraw school boundaries and send children from one Rancho Cucamonga neighborhood in the Dona Merced area to Central School met with opposition from parents.

They objected to being singled out and stated that since Central School would be under construction next year it would not be a good atmosphere for additional children.

Parents lined up to ask questions about the new plan last week.

"My preference would have been to leave it as it is," said John Hadfield, one of the parents who protested earlier.

"I'm convinced that (board members) did their best to come up with the best solution," he said. "They were in a situation where they couldn't win either way."

Hadfield, who along with others in his neighborhood

Deadline passes for families to depart

By Mike Krapfl

As many as 12 families had until last Thursday to leave their longtime homes in the West Valley's migrant labor camp, an agent for the camp's owner said earlier that week.

"We gave them 60 days rent free," Al Friesen said of the families then still living in the San Gabriel Valley Labor Association Camp in Rancho Cucamonga.

"They've had ample time to find another place to live," he said.

Friesen is working with Orange County developer Edward Halvajian to convert the dusty camp into apartments or condominiums.

He said he hoped bulldozers can begin leveling the camp on Arrow Highway near the Cucamonga Wash as early as this week.

Carmen Myers, a member of the Humanity United Group (HUG), said her group will "fight to the end" to stop the bulldozers from entering the camp before all its residents have been relocated.

Myers acknowledged that each resident had been given notice to vacate the camp, but said affordable housing isn't available for the nearly 80 people who remain.

HUG is a loose coalition of churches and concerned citizens that has been trying to find affordable housing for the camp's residents since February.

Since then, the organization has moved four families from the camp.

Myers said HUG hopes to stop Halvajian's bulldozers from moving families onto the streets by forcing him into court and formal eviction proceedings.

Steven Robinson, an attorney with Inland Counties Legal Services in Riverside, wouldn't say whether that is what he plans to do for his clients in the labor camp.

He said, "We don't know what the landlord will do on the ninth (when the residents are to leave).

"When we do, we'll assess the situation and then decide what move to make," he said.

When asked what he would do if residents remain in the camp last Thursday, Friesen said, "We're sure not going to be tyrants."

He said if families have found housing but can't move immediately, "that's no problem.

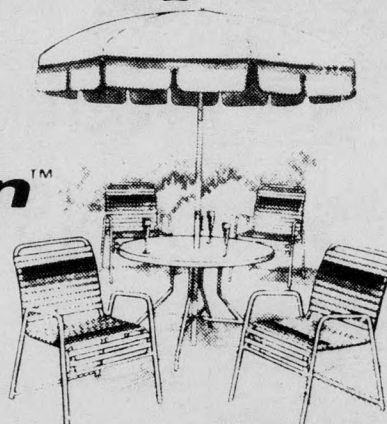

"If somebody comes to us with a legitimate reason for staying a little longer, we'll extend the deadline," he said.

Plans for developing the property, however, are on "a fast track," he said. Deadline extensions therefore will be short.

Paul Gomez, president of HUG, said the organization would take advantage of any extensions to try to move the families into government-subsidized housing.

Those who can't clean call their local Molly Maid

By Paula Monarez

Jill Mangerum works about 70 hours a week, hauling merchandise across three states and keeping the books in fine order.

The last thing on her mind is housecleaning.

"I just don't have time," the Upland woman said. "I don't want to spend my weekends cleaning. I want to spend it with my husband. But I also don't like my house to be dirty."

Last month, Mangerum found a way to rid her home of dust and dirt, without lifting a broom.

Her answer was Molly Maid, a professional housecleaning service.

Although people would have been surprised at such behavior 30 years ago, professional housecleaning services are fast becoming a necessity in two-income households.

Women today believe it's more important to spend their free time with family members than with a broom.

These women are turning to cleaning services.

"My mother was so good she even scrubbed the sidewalk,"

Mangerum said. "There is only so much stuff I can do in a day. And housework is not my main priority anymore. So, it's worth the $40 I pay a week."

Packed with cleansers, dust rags, a vacuum cleaner and a lot of elbow grease, a Molly Maid team, dressed in a traditional English uniform, twice a month polishes Mangerum's coffee table, removes the streaks on her kitchen floor and generally leaves her home sparkling clean.

"They do a better job than I do," Mangerum said.

Cheryl Gaiefsky, who has a Molly Maid crew clean her home once a week, agreed.

"I can find better things to do with my time than housecleaning," the Alta Loma resident said.

For Susan Gniot, who owns the Molly Maid franchise locally, those words are the sweet sound of success.

Since starting up the franchise in January, Gniot's business has grown so fast, she has had to add on a second working crew.

"I am really surprised at the response," Gniot said. "I didn't realize how much of a need there

Turner to turn into Hermosa next spring

Rancho Cucamonga's Turner Avenue will become Hermosa Avenue next spring.

The City Council by a 3-2 vote approved the name change in order to unify city streets under one name whenever possible.

Turner Avenue now runs north from Ontario through Cucamonga. At Base Line Road the roadway becomes Hermosa Avenue.

The council voted to unify the street under the name Hermosa because of the name's historical significance. Hermosa was the name of one of two tracts of land that eventually combined to form what is now Alta Loma.

Because some Turner residents told the council that changing their address to Hermosa would be an unfair inconvenience, Councilwoman Deborah Brown voted against the proposal.

really is."

Nationwide the business is booming.

Last year Molly Maid Inc. grossed an excess of $3 million in this country, according to Frank Flack, president of U.S. Molly Maid Inc.

The company started with one franchise in October 1984 and now has more than 75 franchises, Flack said.

Susan Garland, who runs another professional cleaning service in Claremont called Mini Maids, is not shocked to see the numbers increase.

In one year, Garland's business has gone from cleaning a handful of homes a day to 100 a week. She is currently assembling a fifth cleaning crew.

"It's been tremendous," she said.

The Claremont resident believes the ball is just starting to roll.

"You watch," Garland said. "It's going to really be in demand as more and more women enter the labor force. I don't see this business dropping at all."

Labor statistics back her up. In 1987, more than 55 percent of women are in the labor force. That's 36 percent more than a generation ago and the number is expected to increase.

One reason is the reasonable price for having a home clean, Gniot said.

Starting cost is usually $40.

"It depends on how big the house is, on how many knick knacks one has and how much cleaning is necessary," Gniot said.

Homes are cleaned weekly, bi-weekly, once a month — even once a year, Gniot said.

Before signing up another home to clean, Gniot visits with potential clients for estimates and lists all the cleaning to be done by her employees.

A bonded and insured cleaning crew of either two or four people, spends one to three hours doing wet cleaning, which means doing the kitchen and bathrooms, and dry cleaning, including vacuuming and dusting.

Building boom could buckle over smog regulations

By Andrew Horan

The Inland Empire's building boom could buckle if a federal agency follows through with its threat this week to limit highway construction funds and halt construction in smog-choked cities.

Lee Thomas, administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, this week threatened to withhold federal highway funds and limit major new industrial construction in 35 urban areas that will fail to meet clean-air standards by Dec. 31, 1987.

Those sanctions could delay or kill $24 million in funds to improve street access to Ontario International Airport (which Congress approved after overriding President Reagan's veto of a highway bill April 2), the proposed Foothill Freeway and new industrial development in the area.

Sanctions "could possibly bring some problems" to local developers, said Tom Kohl, executive director of the Baldy View chapter of the Building Industry Association.

"But builders are very ready to work with anyone in the region to clean up the air problems" and help stave off the sanctions, Kohl said.

Regional smog regulators here — who have known for at least five years that Los Angeles and the West Valley have had no chance of meeting the federal level for clean, healthy air — blasted Thomas' announcement.

"This area should not be punished," said Ron Ketcham, spokesman for the South Coast

Air Quality Management District.

AQMD monitors and regulates stationary pollution sources in the non-desert areas of San Bernardino, Riverside, Los Angeles and Orange counties.

"To be punished now is very unfair," Ketcham continued.

"This area has worked hard toward improving the air, and meeting the standards by (the end of) 1987 was always recognized by everyone as an impossibility," he said.

Bill Sessa, spokesman for the state Air Resources Board, agreed. ARB controls pollution from vehicles and other mobile sources.

"We have the strictest air quality regulations. It's counter-productive to penalize California," he said.

Withholding freeway funds, for instance, might lead to more congestion and therefore more vehicular air pollution, Ketcham and Sessa said.

But Norton Younglove, a Riverside County supervisor who is chairman of the AQMD governing board, welcomed the news.

"Not because I welcome the sanctions, but (because) it puts it on the record that they have no choice" but to enforce a provision of the federal Clean Air Act (1970) that calls for the EPA to impose sanctions in dirty-air areas.

"On the ozone factor, we are far in exceedence of any other area in the country," Younglove said.

Pollution levels often are three times higher in the Los Angeles basin than in other American

Conference to help teachers slated

Techniques to help teachers more effectively present math and science concepts will be the main focus on the upcoming Project SMART (Science and Mathematics Alliance Reaching Teachers) Conference, set for April 25 in 1500 Life Sciences Building at the University of California, Riverside.

Cost for the one-day seminar is $30 for one unit, $25 for non-credit.

Actress expanding investment in area

Actress Doris Day is expanding her investment in the West Valley by proposing another housing subdivision north of Rancho Cucamonga, her development consultant said recently.

Day and her son Terry Melcher are principal owners in an 830-home development proposed for 256 acres near the intersection of Etiwanda Avenue and 24th Street north of Rancho Cucamonga, said Gary Mitchell, a Rancho Cucamonga development consultant.

Mitchell said he is representing Day and other owners of the project in seeking county approval for the master-planned residential community.

The project mostly will involve single-family homes to be zoned at three to an acre, Mitchell said.

Commission agrees with high court decree

By Patrick McGreevy

SAN BERNARDINO — Minorities and women should in some cases be promoted over white male applicants who score better in tests and interviews, the county's Affirmative Action Commission recommended recently.

Many of the commission's comments were aimed at the county Probation Department.

Department head Jerry Hill admitted he has fallen short of affirmative action goals in the number of women and Hispanic males promoted into management.

The commission referred to last month's U.S. Supreme Court ruling that Santa Clara County was correct in hiring a woman for a dispatcher job that no female had ever held, even though the woman scored a few points lower on tests than a white male applicant.

The commission said San Bernardino County should determine which jobs lack sufficient female or minority representation and then give openings in those positions to qualified female and minority applicants, said Jess Bracey, county affirmative action officer.

"It's very difficult to say that someone who has received three points less or four points less on a variety of tests, that she is less qualified," Bracey told the commission.

Commissioner Bobby Bevins said "preferential treatment" is due minorities and women in certain probation department management jobs because, despite qualifying, they have been overlooked in the past.

He pointed out that the last hiring of a probation department supervisor drew 12 applicants, seven of whom were minorities or women. The three finalists chosen by a department panel were all white males.

During the last 10 years, those promoted to the position of Probation Officer III were six white males, four white females, one black male and two Hispanic males, Hill said.

The one black female applicant for that job category was turned down. There were no Hispanic female applicants.

During the same period, promotions to the position of Supervising Probation Officer were limited to five white males, two white females and one Hispanic male, Hill admitted.

But Hill said he is bound by county policy to hire the best qualified applicant, regardless of that person's race or gender.

Another part of the problem is the lack of applicants from the female and minority communities, he testified. However, Hill said his department is making extra efforts to train and prepare minority and female probation officers for promotion. "The decision made here hopefully will be a historic one for this county," said Commission Chairman Armando Navarro of Ontario.

brought a plan with alternatives to the original plan to the March 18 meeting, said the main concern was pushing the youngsters ahead.

"Our concerns were the kids growing up too fast," said Hadfield, whose daughter will be in sixth grade next year.

But Baker said that something had to be done to take care of the ever-growing population at the two elementary schools. The projected number of students at Dona Merced next year will be cut by 30 to 810 students with the new plan and the number of Valle Vista students will be 620 instead of the originally projected 690, she said.

The portable classrooms now occupied by the sixth graders will be quickly filled by other classes next year, she said.

Travelers will meet

The Upland Travelers will meet Tuesday at 1:30 p.m., Central School Auditorium, 415 E. G St., Ontario.

A program of slides "America the Beautiful" will be presented by Col. Dana Alexander.

Hadfield said he was pleased that the plan to move the sixth graders is only in effect for next year and will be thoroughly studied by a new committee before a decision on whether to make the change permanent is made.

Firefighters association gives youth sports boost

More than $3,000 donated in Rancho Cucamonga

Several Rancho Cucamonga youth sports organizations have been given a financial boost by the members of the Rancho Cucamonga Professional Firefighters Association.

This year the group, represented by the firefighters of the Foothill Fire Protection District, has donated a total of $3,025 to various youth organizations in the community.

The funds were raised through a Country Western and fireworks show sponsored by the association last year.

"We sponsor a family-type event every year for this purpose," said association president Mike Ploung. "After the money comes in we give a large portion back to the community to support these kinds of youth-oriented organizations. The rest is given for burn treatment and burn education to area burn wards and some is set aside for special association events," Ploung said.

The organizations that received donations were: Ace T-Ball, Ace Youth Softball, Cosmos Soccer Club, Lightning Soccer Club, Alta Loma Little League, American Youth Soccer Organization, Citrus Little League, Aztecs Soccer Club, Outlaws Soccer Club, Lasers Soccer Club, Surf Soccer Club, Deer Canyon Little League, Miss Softball America, Rancho Cucamonga Pony/Colt, Rancho Pop Warner Football and Vineyard Little League.

This year the association fundraiser will be a family circus to be held May 17 at Chaffey College in Alta Loma. Tickets are $20 for an entire family. For more information, call 983-3848 or 983-3338.

Tidwell honors 2 youths, fireman, sheriff's detective

Two Rancho Cucamonga youths, a fireman and a sheriff's detective were among 15 civilians and law enforcement officers honored recently by San Bernardino County Sheriff Floyd Tidwell.

Brent Dickenback, 13, and Michael Smith, 11, both of Rancho Cucamonga, received a Distinguished Service Award for obtaining a license plate number and a vehicle description which led to the arrest of a suspect in a hit-and-run traffic collision.

Rancho Cucamonga fireman Thomas Salisbury was similarly honored for his efforts last February in trying to revive an unconscious 2-month-old child.

Detective Glen Pratt was presented a Distinguished Service Commendation for his investigation of commercial burglaries and grand thefts that led to the identity of suspects in 45 felony cases in the valley. As a result, another 45 felonies were cleared in San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties.

metropolitan areas, according to AQMD records.

Ozone, a by-product of automobile and industrial emissions, reduces lung capacity, causes premature aging of the lungs and is a general respiratory irritant.

Until last week, Thomas has said he would not impose sanctions in those areas that make major strides toward cleaning the air.

Regional smog regulators took that to mean the Los Angeles basin would escape penalties.

Some Washington observers told The Daily Report that Thomas' call for sanctions now is a signal that Congress should extend the Dec. 31, 1987, deadline as it moves this year to renew the Clean Air Act.

An aide to Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Los Angeles, said the administrator's letter may have just that effect.

"We want to turn this pressure for deadline extension and no sanctions into a tighter Clean Air Act," said the aide, who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

Upland to pay for damage

Upland's City Council has agreed to hand over $95,754.19 to General Telephone Co. to pay for the damage city water workers caused when they broke the lines in August.

The money will come out of the city's Water Reserve Fund which totals $895,639, according to City Finance Director Phyllis Proctor.

The accident occurred when city crews hit the GTE conduit while repairing a leaking water line at the intersection of Euclid Avenue and Foothill Boulevard. A backhoe probably pushed a rock into the line, breaking it and allowing water to enter the lines and short out a junction, a city report concluded.

The accident left 750 customers with no dial tone until the telephone company had the lines repaired, GTE spokesman Dick Symchak said.
